Axel Roth named Marshall Center ombudsman

Marshall Associate Director Axel Roth has been named ombudsman for the Center. The move is part of NASA's Ombuds Program recommended by the Agency-wide Action Team. The team is applying findings of the Columbia Accident Investigation Board to other NASA operations and will release a report later this week. Ombuds, named for each NASA center, are available when employees feel regular channels for raising issues and concerns are not working effectively. For details, see this week's "Marshall Star" or go to "Inside Marshall."
